Suited and booted for torch relay

Staff at Derby chartered accountants and business advisers Dains have taken part in a nationwide event to raise money for the Alzheimer's Society.

Until November this year, participating members of the UK200Group of independent accountancy and legal firms are relaying an Olympic-style torch across the UK.

With their chosen theme of 'support the suits', staff at Dains relayed the torch between each of their local offices in Burton, Rugeley, Lichfield and Birmingham.

The charitable accountants walked and cycled dressed in a variety of themed suits including shell suits, cabaret suits and wet suits.

Making sense to have calls paid for Investment Sense has raised over £3,500 for Childline and in doing so has won the NSPCC Business Challenge in Nottingham.

The company organised a variety of networking events with the 'beermat entrepreneur' Mike Southon, 7IM's Justin Urquhart-Stewart and former Dragons' Den panellist Rachel Elnaugh.

Marketing manager Phillip Bray said: "It costs £4 for a call to be answered and the money we raised will go straight to help Childline answer more calls from vulnerable children, not just here in Nottingham but nationwide.

"We plan to run more events later this year and into 2012 to help support Childline and the work that they do."

And finally...

The UK's largest corporate relay race takes place in Nottingham on September 11.

East Midlands Business advisory firm Cooper Parry has teamed up with the Dame Kelly Holmes Legacy Trust, in which the double Olympic champion is putting teams of runners through their paces with a master class in the run up to the event. Her charity gives young people the chance to work with world class sports stars.

Dame Kelly Holmes said: "I am delighted that my charity has been chosen by Cooper Parry to benefit from this fantastic Corporate Relay Challenge. We already have strong links in the region with local business though our partners, Nottingham's The Media Group."
